4. KYC (Know Your Customer) Requirements

What is KYC and why is it required?
KYC is the process the Bank uses to verify a customer's genuine identity, establish beneficial ownership, build a customer profile, and confirm that account activity stays consistent with the customer's declared profile. It allows the Bank to manage risk and meet regulatory requirements.

What documents are required?
At minimum: valid Proof of Identity plus a recent passport-size photograph. Depending on individual circumstances, the Bank may additionally request Proof of Residence.

When is KYC performed?

- Opening a new deposit account or applying for a loan facility

- Requesting an additional account, locker, card, credit facility, or e-banking service (if KYC details have changed or were never completed)
- When the Bank needs further details based on transaction behaviour
- When there is a change in ownership structure, authorized signatories, mandate holders, or beneficial owners

Is KYC mandatory, and what happens if I don't submit it?
Yes, KYC submission is mandatory for all customers. For a prospective customer, the Bank may decline to open the requested account. For an existing account holder, the Bank reserves the right to end the relationship for failure to provide required KYC information or documentation.

Why does the Bank ask for KYC again if I already submitted it once?
Customer details such as mailing address, occupation, contact number, or typical transaction volume can change over time. The Bank periodically refreshes this information to keep records accurate.
